I did receive your e-mail, thank you.

In my experience, I find little, if any, benefit from involving client's in informal conference calls/meetings, etc. with opposing parties or attorneys.

I'd be more than happy to discuss this matter with David directly, but I would not agree to have his client directly involved in a conference call.

If David's client demands to be involved, I think the best avenue allowing for his involvement is a confidential non-binding mediation which I'm sure can be scheduled within days. I'm likewise sure we could have any out-of-state parties or attorneys appear via phone or teleconference.

Please let me know what you'd like to do.

Thanks

Dear [Redacted]

I have had a chance to speak with my client. As you may be aware, we have most recently filed suits attempting to block Gawkers further distribution or release and hopefully any other media outlets that may be out there.

My client has indicated the desire to become in control of the tapes. I had told him of our discussion. Would you be interested in a conference call with my client and I for some time next week?

I have to head back to Tampa to deal with some other matters and my client has expressed a desire of participating personally in attempting to resolve this matter.

Sincerely,
David R. Houston
