PREDICATION:

At the request of yourself, in conjunction with your client, Terry Bollea and FBI Special Agent [redacted] a polygraph examination was administered to [redacted] on December 14, 2012, in [redacted] at the [redacted] Clearwater Beach, Florida 33767. Subsequent to a meeting with examinee, [redacted] Terry Bollea, myself, and you, but prior to beginning the examination, the examinee reviewed and signed a voluntary consent form allowing the completion of this examination, and releasing [redacted] and Tampa Polygraph Services, LLC – including any agents, employees, employers, or affiliates of any liability resulting from this polygraph examination. This signed statement assures that the examinee was fully advised that the entire examination would be recorded, that all information, findings, and examination data would be subsequently disseminated to the above named addressees, and that the examinee could terminate the examination at any time.

During the aforementioned meeting prior to the examination, [redacted] acknowledged to all parties that she and an unidentified [redacted] came into possession of five videos that recorded Mr. Bollea engaged in sexual activity with Heather Clem while being secretly audio and video recorded without his knowledge and consent. She said that it was [redacted] practice to pass his wife around to celebrities and secretly record them having sex with her. She stated that she and [redacted] collaborated on how, when and where to release two of the DVDs to generate interest and set up their subsequent demands for $300,000 in exchange for the remaining three DVDs, one of which was most damaging to the reputation and income potential of Mr. Bollea. She said that she and [redacted] shopped around for a place to release the videos and personally released them on Gawker and TMZ. She said they held the most damaging DVD back because it would cause Mr. Bollea the most harm and was therefore the most valuable. She said she was in it strictly for financial gain and [redacted] involved her to protect his identity. She further stated that the writing on the DVD labels matched writing she has seen by [redacted] and that [redacted] assured her these

David,

Please allow this correspondence to confirm that we have agreed to settle our dispute as follows:

- $300K total payments. (Fifty percent due upon execution; 25% on 9 month anniversary of execution and 25% on 16 month anniversary of execution)
- Complete release of any and all claims known and unknown
- confidentiality
- mutual non-disparagement

In case of breach by my client:

- disgorgement of profits
- return of money already paid
- cessation of money to be paid
- reps & warranties re source of footage
- disclosure of identified individuals who have knowledge of and/or were shown footage
- disclosure if any of any other persons who are/were known to possess footage if anyone

In case of breach by either party:

- confidential binding arbitration in either NV or CA under American Arbitration Assoc or JAMS

Your client will be provided with a detailed outline of the footage. He will be awarded an opportunity to authenticate the footage at the closing. If the footage fails to substantially match the outline & he is not the person actually filmed, deal is off.

I hope your client avoids the expense & aggravation of a polygraph. However, if he opts for one, he pays for the exam and travel of myself and my client to the exam.

I will work on the release this weekend.

Deal must close within 30 days.

Extortion Matter

b6 -1, 2, 3
b7C -1, 2, 3

Hi [Redacted] - Hope you had a good 4th.

I can only assume that you, like me, have not heard anything in regards to the Hogan extortion matter. I was talking with [Redacted] today who wanted me to make contact with you for the following:

b6 -1, 2, 3
b7C -1, 2, 3

1. At this point, everything is stale and there isn't anything to do. Is there any reason not to approach [Redacted] at this point to inquire about the origin of the tapes, the custody of them, production, etc. In other words, start from the top and let him tell us what happened from his point of view. This would require us to make contact with his attorney and explain to him what our interest is -- which he may not want us talking with [Redacted]. Also, [Redacted] has already given us one story of which he will either confirm or alter depending on what he tells us this time. To be honest, I'm not sure it helps/hurts/or even matters from your office's perspective. Short of a total confession to a bigger conspiracy, I'm not sure management will be swayed by what he has to say. However, from our perspective, it will leave no proverbial stone uncovered and tie up loose ends.... Thoughts?
2. If the writing is and has been on the wall for this thing, and it's not going to go anywhere, my office is going to require a declination letter.

Let me know your thoughts. It seems we have done all we could, had all the meetings, talked to everyone and nothing has moved. If that's the case, we either approach [Redacted] or one last hurrah, or we get the case declined so we can move on. We know what a declination will bring -- management is going to be getting a call from Houston/Hogan -- but that was always on the table.
