Subject: DRESS CODE

Your Honor,

I was brought up to respect the law and all it stood for and a part of that was that men did not wear hats in church or in court unless it was a religious requirement.

In the case you a trying involving Mr Bollea (aka Hogan) he alone in your court wears his trademark costume and headdress everyone else shows due deference to the institution by assuming normal attire.

If his practice is allowed to spread then perhaps future litigants will be appearing before you wearing Micky Mouse ears, etc.

Surely a quiet word with his lawyers would ensure that he changes into a suit and does not wear a hat thus showing the respect and deference that you and your court deserve.
